

The Cross - Kingussie

After the picnic we went for a walk and then drove to our hotel in Kingussie. Beautifully nestled among the trees and along a small stream located hotel / restaurant The Cross . Nice, neat room overlooking the back garden where red squirrels bird feeders were on the plunder. Super Funny to watch it ..

The hotel (9 rooms) has a restaurant in which is very high for years in all kinds of lists, eg "Best restaurant in Scotland" etc. So the expectations were high!

And expectations were more than fulfilled .. Highlights: butter on a stone .. :) duck 3 ways, foie gras ballotine, pig three ways and the chocolate dessert with peanut butter (shame about the banana ice cream). Service is also quite fine. It was a Monday night pretty well occupied, but the people were rather quiet on the food and there was not a little background music .. What makes you automatically lower / softer start talking when it is very quiet in the dining room. So it would all be perfect with a little music in the background!

The benefit of eating in your hotel is that you only need to roll back to your room and dive into your bed ... with the murmur of the brook in the background sleep!
